INVESTOR IN PEOPLE

Supporting you

Walsall Housing Group (whg) can now offer a new type of support package for young parents.

Bringing up children is not easy, especially when you are in your teens or early twenties. Whether you have a partner to support you or you are on your own, juggling the demands of work, education and parenting can be a real challenge.

That is where we can help. We now have two support workers to help couples or single people gain skills and receive sound advice. Together we hope to make the first stages of parenting a little bit easier.

Who is it for?

This help and advice is available to people aged 16 to 25 and living in rented accommodation in Walsall. It is for couples, for single parents, and for parents-to-be. You may be living on your own, living with your parents, or looking for new accommodation.

What we can do to help

There are many ways we can help you cope with being a parent. When you first contact us we will assess the amount of help you need and look at the specific ways we may be able to make things easier for you. Our aim is to give you the skills and knowledge to do things for yourself. Our help can last for up to two years and would involve a set number of hours per week talking to you about raising your family. The kind of areas we can help with include:

- life and parenting skills
- child support
- education
- money and debt advice
- personal support
- sexual health advice
- safety and security
- looking after your home.

Our two colleagues are dedicated to helping you and they have the practical experience to provide you with help on everything from furnishing a flat on a budget, to finding college courses and claiming benefits. Their aim is to help you help yourself. We want you to be able to manage your young family successfully while living independently. If you think you would like to apply for help or know someone else who may benefit from this kind of support, please contact us.
