Corporate Director of People and Learning

Theresa is whg's Corporate Director of People and Learning. She joined whg in February 2011, having spent the majority of her career working in Human Resources and Organisational Development roles in public and not-for-profit organisations.

Theresa is helping to accelerate whg's transformation by ensuring that its people strategies are fully aligned to the business strategy and, crucially, that it has the right people and organisational culture to deliver now and into the future.

She believes passionately in the linkages between being a great place to work, operating a successful business and delivering exceptional customer service. She also has a keen interest in promoting colleague health and wellbeing and the correlation between good physical and mental health and the ability to deal with uncertainty and adapt to change.

Recently Theresa added Community Investment to her leadership portfolio and is looking forward to creating innovative ways to link the great work whg does in supporting customers into employment to its drive to attract and develop new talent.

In her personal life, Theresa likes hill walking, Zumba, spinning and reading.
